

Public education and outreach efforts

The City's public education and outreach efforts include but not limited to: Information about Stormwater on its public access channel (Ch21) and website, Information booths at the city's Earth Day in April, Pacific Days in July, and during the Recycling Collection Event in September. Most new construction projects go through a pre-application process. During that process the property owner/developer is made aware of the stormwater design requirements (current approved King County Manual). Property owners are encouraged to utilize low impact development, if it is feasible. This will change to require to prove that low impact development is not feasible, prior to choosing other methods. Activities on the property are required to use best management practices.
